COURTROOM DEPUTY: Emily Tauscheck

The court held a hearing on the status of this chapter 11 case and the debtors' motion to establish a deadline to file proofs of claim. A recording from the hearing has been posted to the docket.

The debtors informed the court that they intended to amend their schedules expeditiously to add 1,500-2,000 individuals who may be holders of unsecured claims unknown to the debtors, but to obtain the identities and addresses of those individuals, the debtors may have to ask the District Court to modify a protective order that restricts the use of records containing the identity of those individuals. Based on the debtors' report, the court held the motion to set the claim-bar deadline in abeyance pending the debtors' identification of the additional potential claimholders and either their amendment of schedules to reflect that identification or their supplementation of the record by correspondence or otherwise to address a process for affording notice to the additional potential claimholders.

The debtors stated that they would file a letter by October 17, 2022, informing the court about their efforts to obtain the necessary information through consensual means or, alternatively, their filing of a motion in the District Court to modify the protective order.
